

10/14-89

152 West 57th St.,

New-York, October 14th, 1889.

Dear Sir:

Since returning to Town I have found the inclosed letter, which can not be intended for me. Thank you for forwarding it.

I see by published extracts in the newspapers that "The Trials of Magazine Editor" was published in the October number, which has not ^{it seems,} been sent me, as heretofore. It may have miscarried, however.

Would you like a paper, "The Genesis of Wealth", of about 4,000 words, to show how millionaires are apt to be affected by their riches? I think the subject a good one.

Mr. Wm. L. Walsh is, I learn, now living here, and I have not the pleasure of knowing who is his successor. I wish him, at a venture, every sort of success.

Truly yours,

Jennius Henri Browne.
